Keynote Speaker, Dr. Leena Akhtar

Leena Akhtar is a graduate of the PhD program in the Department of the History of Science at Harvard University, with a secondary field in Studies of Women, Gender, and Sexuality. Her scholarly interests focus on the history of medicine and mid to late 20th century psychiatry, particularly trauma psychiatry--work that has been influenced and informed by her six years as a rape crisis counselor and emergency room medical advocate in Pittsburgh and New York City. In addition to a longstanding interest in the history of psychiatry, she is interested in historical and cultural changes around power-based violence, including sexual violence and workplace harassment and discrimination. akhtar@fas.harvard.edu
